

Emiliano Void is the Founder and CEO of nuwave Equity Corporation giving leadership and oversight to all aspects of the organization's activities. He is responsible for the coordination, development and implementation of systemic solutions centered around the dismantlement anti-Black and systemic racism through profitable and innovative approaches.

Emiliano grew up in Montreal, Canada and has lived in the US for the past 11 years splitting time between the two countries. His need to get involved in equity work came directly as a result of the continued highly publicized racial injustices that Black people face today. Unable to stay on the sidelines, he was spurred into action and decided to try to affect change in any possible way across his sphere of influence. He joined community groups, started community-based initiatives, lead a Black focused employee resource group in his workplace as well as an industry wide initiative to dismantle systemic racism.

Through nuwave he aspires to drive real, actionable, and sustainable change that creates more opportunities for Black and systemically excluded people, brings awareness and conversation to a problem that is long overdue for a solution, and helps organizations understand the profitability in equity.
